VICHY ASSURES NAZIS THAT SHE WILL CO-OPERATE

Crisis Between Reich and Vanquished France Was Settled Today

PETAIN SAID TO AGREE

Pierre Laval Will Remain A Member of The French Government

(By International News Service)
BERLIN, Dec. 18.—The crisis between the Reich and vanquished France was settled today with a compromise whereby Vichy assured Germany that the French Government will not deviate from its policy of co-operation with the Axis powers.

Latin Club Celebrates Feast of Saturnalia

One of the most magnificent functions of the high school Christmas season was enjoyed last evening when the Latin Club of Bristol high school celebrated its sixth annual Feast of the Saturnalia.

The decorations were in keeping with the Imperial Age of Rome. A huge figure representing "Saturn, God of the Harvest" and "Sowing," graced the stage behind an altar built for the occasion. The tables were arranged in a horseshoe. Within the opening artificial grass formed a path upon which stood stuffed animals and a great crystal ball stood. Adding to the beauty of the occasion were the spectacular lighting effects. Miniature Saturns and imitation wax tablets adorned the table.

The banquet was prepared by mothers and former Latin Club members, and served by the Freshman students under supervision of Miss Claire Coles. Mrs. Ellis planned and supervised the entire banquet.

The evening was made more enjoyable by entertainment furnished by members of the club. Among the selections were: ballet dance, Marcella Budzko; vocal solo, "Ave Maria," Joseph Galzerano; piano solo, Dorothy Eelman, who acted as accompanist for other musical numbers; carols, double quartet consisting of Dorothy Eelman, Helen Ostrowski, Sylvia Singer, Doris Vasey; Joseph Galzerano, Paul Ruby, Alfred Rogers and John Artim. "The Story of the Other Wise Man" was told by Frances Tomlinson, and Albert Tomlinson related the significance of the Saturnalia.

Sound movies were shown by Keith Rosser and Robert Monti who were also in charge of all decorations.

Robert R. Baurath served as Pontifex Maximus, high priest of the ceremonies. Emilie Bilecki was student head of the Feast.

Musicians and Dancer To Appear on Program

Italians Claim British Pressure Diminished

Rome, Dec. 18.—As the result of heavy losses in men and material, British troops have "diminished their pressure" on Italian desert positions in North Africa, the Fascist High Command announced today.

Summarizing yesterday's operations, the High Command reported that the British mechanized units were subjected to a heavy shelling by Italian artillery and that other units behind the front-line were pounded by Fascist bombers.

The 6,000-ton British cruiser, which was reported to have been torpedoed while shelling the Libyan port of Bardia, has since capsized and sunk, the communique claimed.

As part of operations in Italian East Africa, the High Command reported that attacks were carried out on British motorized detachments in the vicinity of Elwak on the Kenya-Somaliland border.

MATTHEWS TO BLAME IF SEWING PROJECTS STOP

Governor James Says State Is Paying the Same As It Has For Last 2 1/2 Years

ADVISES THE WORKERS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 18.—State WPA Administrator, Philip Matthews, will be responsible if sewing projects employing 12,000 women in the State are abandoned next month, according to Governor James, and his relief secretary, Howard L. Russell.

Matthews wrote workers last week that while the WPA act required a 25 percent sponsors' contribution, he would accept one of 15 percent, equal to $10 a month per worker, to renew the sewing project.

He added he was informed the Gov.

George Wiley was elected president of the Buckingham Farmers' Club at its meeting entertained in the Grange hall, at Buckingham, by Harvey Price, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Flack and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rice. Between 70 and 80 persons attended the meeting which was featured by the serving of a supper, at the conclusion of which the group joined in the singing of carols with J. Harrison Isles at the piano.

The main feature of the business session was the election of officers. In addition to Mr. Wiley, the following officers were named to serve during the year: Vice-President, J. Comly Stover; secretary, Mrs. James P. McLaughlin; treasurer, Paul Neppes, and executive committee, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Welles and Mr. and Mrs. Randolph R. Pursell.

Election of officers, a brief entertainment and the reports of committees featured the largely attended meeting of the Solebury Farmers' Club in Trinity Hall, Solebury, by Mrs. Evelyn Johnson and son, David, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hartmann. Approximately 150 persons attended the meeting which was preceded by a supper, at the conclusion of which a play, "A Christmas Entertainment in a District School 40 years ago," was presented.

The part of the school teacher was taken by Robert Bruce Moyer, New Hope.

Results of the election were as follows: President, Frank Durech; vice-president, Winfield Magill; secretary, Miss Alice McInerney; treasurer, I. Stricker Worthington, and executive committee, R. Moore Price, Herbert Everhardt and Dorothy Hartman. Other members of the executive committee are Roland Carter, Mrs. Walter W. Ely and Walter Shaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Headley will have as Christmas guests, Mrs. Elizabeth Fallop, Philadelphia; Miss Alice Headley, Buck Hill Inn, and Warren Woodruff, Bristol.

SANTA TO VISIT MANY SUNDAY SCHOOLS HERE

Christmas Festivals to Hold Chief Interest in Sunday Schools This Week

SOME TO BE TONIGHT

The season of Christmas festivals is here, and with it a measure of joy that comes to the tots and older girls and boys participating that will be remembered long after they have reached womanhood and manhood.

Cantatas, singing of gladsome carols, recitations and story-telling—all come in for a share of the happiness of the annual Christmas festival, not to mention the party features which revolve about the distribution of refreshments or candy and fruit, and gifts.

"Pilgrims to Bethlehem," a Christmas cantata, under the direction of Miss G. Clavarella, the missionary in charge, will be given Friday evening at eight o'clock, in the Presbyterian Church of Our Saviour. The cantata calls for many singers, as well as characters. Most of the singing will be by the senior choir. Miss Jennie Tisone will accompany at the piano. The soloists are Miss Clara Caucci and Miss Vilma Viviani.

The pageant presents a few of the types of Pilgrims to Bethlehem for the enrollment, as brought to mind by "Remembrance," which carries the continuity of the first scene. Young, mature, or aged, they are bitter, worried, hopeless over the prospect of added burdens. Remembrance comforts them with the promises of the Messiah. Joseph comes, with him Mary, spent and weary. The Shepherds, encouraging him, are sure that he and Mary will find shelter. Night comes, and with it the Angel announcing the birth.

An interlude brings the return of Shepherds and Pilgrims, joyously singing of glad tidings.

In the second scene the continuity is divided between "Remembrance" and the Angel of Christmas. There is the Bethlehem manger, simply as a symbol of the Nativity. At the call of the Angel, Pilgrims of today come, the Children, Talent, Toil, all receiving the light of Bethlehem. There is a final appeal to all to seek by faith the manger and to worship the Christ.

The festival of St. James's Episcopal Church School is scheduled for Thursday evening at 7.45; and on the same evening at 7.30 Harriman Methodists will participate in a "treat night" for the Church School.

The scholars of Bristol Presbyterian Sunday School will present a play, "Christ in the Cobbler's Shop," tonight at 7.30 o'clock.

Zion Lutheran Church plans its festival for Sunday evening in the church. The Christmas festival of Bristol Methodist Sunday School will be held

Bethlehem Named On Christmas Eve, 1741

HARRISBURG, Dec. 18.—Bethlehem, called "The Christmas City of the United States," received its name on Christmas Eve 199 years ago, State Department of Commerce research shows.

In the spring of 1741, David Zeisberger and other Moravian Brethren began a new settlement near the forks of the Delaware at the confluence of the Lehigh River and Monocacy Creek in what was then Bucks county, but since has become Northampton.

On Christmas eve of that year, Count Zinzendorf, religious organizer, visited the newly established mission and gave it the Biblical name of Bethlehem. Ever since then Moravian activities in Pennsylvania have centered in Bethlehem and nearby Nazareth.

Travelers in the vicinity of Bethlehem during the holidays will again see the famous illuminated Star of Bethlehem, a 100-foot high steel structure on South Mountain.

More than 40 city blocks are included in the elaborate street lighting consisting of stars and colored bulbs, the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce has informed the State Department of Commerce.

Another highlight of the season's observance in Bethlehem is the Moravian "Putz," a huge depiction of the Nativity scene which each year attracts thousands of visitors.

Make It A Merry Xmas

TO THOSE WHO FORGOT:

With the holiday season approaching, and with so many things to do, it is entirely possible that some may have neglected to purchase their supply of 1940 Christmas Seals. Your purchase of these seals will help to make Christmas merrier for many folk in Bucks County. For some it will open the door to better health and perhaps cure from tuberculosis. For others your purchase will mean protection against this dread disease.

Your purchase will be an investment, not a gift. It will be an investment in the health and welfare of your community. Act today, please.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD H. KELLER,
President, Bucks County Tuberculosis Society.

CAROL SERVICE

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 18.—The monthly meeting of the Cornwells Parent-Teacher Association will be held in the Bensalem high school auditorium, Thursday at eight p. m. After the meeting, the annual Christmas carol service will be held under direction of Miss Grace E. Paist.

ADVERTISING DEADLINE EFFECTIVE NOV. 30TH

All display advertising copy for insertion in The Bristol Courier must be at the Courier office not later than 12 o'clock noon, two days previous to day on which the advertising is to appear. We reserve the right to reject copy received after the designated time.

This rule is made necessary in order to give the mechanical department ample time in which to set the advertisement, and properly illustrate it. It is hoped that advertisers will co-operate and make reservations for space desired, and furnish their copy on time.

Copy will not be accepted after the expiration of the dead-line announced above.

ONE IN EVERY 400

If you would prolong your life, go inside the house and stay inside after 5 o'clock every afternoon. Particularly, do not venture to drive your automobile between the hours of 5 and midnight, and if you are not a driver do not cross streets between those hours. Thus you will greatly increase your chances of living until 1942, or longer, for in 1941 one in every 100 motorists will be injured, one in every 400 pedestrians will be hurt, one in every 3,500 motorists will be killed and one in every 8,000 pedestrians will go to his grave. Half of these accidents will occur between the hours of 5 p. m. and midnight.

These figures appear from the surveys of automobile accidents made by the National Safety Council. They should be warning to every person who uses the streets, and particularly to every motorist. If any reader doubts their accuracy he may be convinced if he will check the long roll of accidents which will, inevitably, be printed in any Monday newspaper. Holiday week-ends are notorious for their accidents on the highways.

One in every 400 automobiles on the roads this week-end will be involved in an accident. It is no longer a question of how many, but rather it has become a question of which one.

PSYCHOLOGY

Psychology is a deep sounding word, and the average person hardly knows what it means. It has been defined as the science of the human mind.

Many people who know little or nothing about theoretical psychology, are in a practical way very good psychologists themselves. A politician may never have studied this science in a book, yet instinct tells him how the minds of his constituents work. Some politicians are so much swayed by every current of popular opinion that blows that they are not much more than mere weather-vanes.

The good salesman is an excellent psychologist. He knows how the mind of his prospect works. He tries to adapt himself to the tendencies in the minds of his customers, and seeks to appeal to different types of minds.

One reason why many persons are poor psychologists is that they are so eager to talk and express their own thoughts that they rarely listen to others.

LEARNING OF ERSATZ

Americans may boast that theirs is the richest nation on earth, but they have learned a trick from the poorest, and that is ersatz or substitution; to put it in a fancy word, synthesis.

A picture in the newspapers gives point to the thought. It shows three mannequins parading in the fashion and science show in New York. One wears a suit and accessories made from milk casing; the second a swimsuit of vinylon, a product of natural gas, coal, oil, salt and air; the third a dress of nylon, another coal by-product.

Of course, it was good publicity, what is commonly known in the parlance of the ship reporter and photographer and the resort agencies as "cheesecake," but even at that it may be taken as part of the program of preparedness, national defense, saving of resources.

When the Greeks besiege Rome they will earn the good will of all headline writers.

NEWS BRIEFS FROM SUBURBAN TOWNS

HULMEVILLE

An enjoyable affair was participated in last evening by members of the Peppy Pals Club, when the annual Christmas party took place at the home of Miss Adeline E. attitude toward it, and we have now been without an Ambassador in London for nearly two months.

RETURNING to Washington today, Mr. Roosevelt found many other things awaiting his attention, including the Walter Logan bill, passed by Congress against his wishes and which he is expected to veto. The plain truth is that since the election the Government has been marking time and in the past two weeks motion has been practically suspended. There have been, of course, rumors that Mr. Roosevelt was not in good physical condition, that he was "terribly tired."

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Gaby said, "It was so generous that you include poor me in the little dinner with the so nice Meester Mallory last night!"

Now Jean could only stand so much of this fineness! She'd played the game fast night—hadn't let Gaby down. But she wasn't to be bluffed in private. Gaby mustn't be allowed to think she'd really got away with anything. Or she'd become insufferable.

So she said firmly, but not unkindly, now: "Don't thank me, for you maneuvered it yourself, Gaby. And don't you think it's a bit early for you to play hostess in this house to my friends? I ordered cocktails and dinner for you in the library last night. What right had you to countermand my order? What right had you to go up to the drawing-room and entertain Walter without even waiting for an introduction?"

The big black eyes widened, distressed. There was shocked dismay in Gaby's voice as she replied: "But I did not know the gentleman was in the drawing-room, Jenn! I go there because I feel lonely—and I wish to practise my singing, which always cheers me."

"Really?" incredulously.

"So I go up, and when I meet him I tell him I have only come to practise my songs—but now that he is here, I go to tell you to hurry. I say, 'NO! Please stay! I would like to hear you sing!' So I think you would like me to be gracious to your friend, and to order the cocktails, and to sing for him."

Jean was certain that Gaby had investigated the attractive Walter through a crack in the library door. Had chased him to the drawing room, and deliberately vamped him, getting first innings. She smiled wryly. "Nice work, Gaby!"

Gaby beamed like an innocent child. "But it was not work! It was pleasure. He is char-r-ming. I enjoy it. I tell him of the lovely party that you will give for me; and he says, so quick, so quick: 'I cannot wait to come!'"

Several suitable and crushing retorts sprang to Jean's mind. But, with an effort, she suppressed them. It wasn't Gaby's fault that her lack of upbringing had made her unresponsive. There was plenty that would have to be overlooked, excused, if they were to remain on peace terms during this "invasion!" "You are not in love with Meester Mallory, chérie?" Gaby went on. "He act as if he were just good friend, although," she pointed out with a knowing smile, "I think he make the flirt a leetle!"

The pain in Jean's heart was sharp. The other's broken accent, used so effectively on Walter, and kept up this morning by way of practice, was an added irritant. The girl could talk quite good English when she wanted to.

A welcome interruption, then, was the entry of Jean's maid. She carried a second tray. On it was a silver jug of café-au-lait. A plate of brioches flanked with cubes of sweet butter.

Jean told Gaby: "You can tuck up on the chaise longue." She didn't want her in her bed.

When the maid had gone, and Gaby was enjoying her typically French breakfast, she said: "You will arrange the invitations for my party this morning, Jean? It is that time it pass so quickly!" apologetically.

Jean thought: "She sees I'm roused, and she's afraid I won't keep my bargain—that I'll kick her out!"

And suddenly she was sorry for Gaby, even if she was an interloper.

"All right, I'll make out a fine list," she promised.

There was a pause.

Gaby coughed nervously. "And another leetle matter—it press so hard. Me, I hate to ask it, but onerstan't it a matter like—that you call it—life and death!"

Jean looked apprehensive. She broke the silence, gruffly. "Well, pull the rabbit out of the hat, can't you?"

"But it is not a rabbit, it is money. One thousand dollars, Jean, please!" Jean gasped. "One thousand dollars? You're crazy!"

"No. But it is ab-so-lutely necessary that I have that sum—queeck!"

"For what?"

"A secret. I cannot tell." The black eyes suddenly filled with tears. One splashed into her cup of coffee.

"You mean, a debt?"

"Yes, Yes," eagerly. "You will get it for me, Jean? Oh, please!"

"From whom? I suppose, like all foreigners who get into this country, you think the sidewalks are full of gold!"—sarcastically.

Gaby sprang up from the chaise longue, almost upsetting her tray. She rushed to the bed, and grabbed Jean's hand.

"All my life I will be grateful if you do this, please! You will tell your stepfather—who is also my stepfather although he does not know it—that you have lost the money in a game of poker!"

"I shall do nothing of the kind!" Dismissed, anger, and an underling of fear in the blue eyes as they met dark ones.

"Then I do what I should have done at the start!" Gaby flashed. "I go to him and tell him who I am! He is good. He is just. Knowing I have been married all these long years, that he was married on a lie, he will give me justice!"

Jean was trapped. She had no alternative but give in to Gaby. What she did have, subsequently, was a disagreeable lecture from Rupert on the evils of gambling.

Ironical that games of chance had never appealed! Also, innately honest, she hated fibbing. Doubly hated this cooked-up story of having lost the money at poker. She had to give Rupert her promise that never again would she play for cash!

She thought: "But I'm gambling for Laurels and my own future! Our security!" Would Gaby, however, grow more and more importunate?

Her stepfather gave her the check for one thousand dollars.

Gaby was jubilant.

"I will accompany you to the bank. You will give me the money in cash, Jenn. It would be dangerous that you endorse the check to me, chérie!" Gaby, apparently, was no fool about money.

The two girls went to the Fifth Avenue bank. With an ill grace she could overcome, for the whole underhand transaction was so distasteful, Jean handed Gaby ten $100 bills.

Gaby, the wary, had drawn her into a phone booth, so there was no chance of anybody seeing this.

"You are a dar-r-ling!" She kissed Jean unexpectedly. "Like the kiss of Judas!" Jean thought.

"And now we part for a leetle. I have things to attend."

Jean hated herself for following Gaby down the avenue. But she urged to get something on Gaby overruled her natural delicacy of mind. Maybe she'd find out something that would rid her of her "house pest?"

She saw the other disappear into the offices of the American Express. Tracked her to the foreign department, keeping well out of sight.

Later, when the coast was clear of Gaby, she tried to wrangle information from the clerk as to where the money had been sent. But all she got for her sleuthing was a shocked snub!

The day of the party that was to introduce Gaby to "society" arrived. Gaby wore a dream of a black taffeta gown that flattered each luscious curve. Gaby, if not in other matters, had an unerring good taste in clothes. She had selected this gown herself. Jean had paid the bill of $95.

Gaby stood dramatically against the wall of the drawing-room that was upholstered in shell-pink brocade. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses that seemed to be reflected in her glowing cheeks. Phrases like "enchanted picture" . . . "exotically lovely" seemed to be on everybody's tongue.

Walter Mallory seemed to be her most persistent cavalier. Gaby's speaking voice had an especially soft, caressing note whenever she talked to the young lawyer. Which was often.

Helen Hobart, who hadn't been invited, crashed the party. She came with a boy named "Buck." He was a beau of Jean's. She had the effrontery to tell her: "I got your message, darling. Rather belated. But I knew you'd want me to give your new 'find' the once-over! She's lovely! Dangerously lovely!" she added, in a whisper, her green eyes measuring Gaby with Walter.

Jean said, out of earshot of Buck: "You're perfectly well aware that I didn't invite you, Helen."

"But mother gave me the message! Oh, dear! You know she's hard of hearing? She must have gone and got it jumbled up with some other invitation!"

Jean looked at Helen with clear and scornful eyes. Helen was pretty well assured that Jean would never go so far as order her out of the house now she was in it. She'd gambled on that.

"Mothers," Helen proceeded airily, "really are problem children, these days. Mine's always putting her foot in it. And yours is—er—foot-loose. Always gadding off somewhere, isn't she?"

The inevitable barb!

"She'll be back any day now." Involuntarily, Jean's eyes went to Gaby. Helen saw them cloud for a moment. Rupert, looking very handsome with a red carnation in his lapel, had joined the French girl and Walter.

"Your stepfather is a most attractive man. Just at the dangerous age!" Helen, unleashed her insinuating laugh. It seemed to say: "She better come back pretty quick, or a younger one may put her hooks in him!"

Jean left her and went over to the guest of honor. My, what an ironical description that was! A guest who could bring dishonor to this house. Only she wouldn't let her!

"Would you sing, Gaby, now?"

"But of course!" with a benevolent smile. "You know I haven't had the pleasure of hearing you sing yet, I've been away so much. And Jean says your voice is beautiful."

Gaby modestly dropped her eyes, displaying incredibly long, up-curved lashes. "You are too kind!" Walter and Rupert escorted her to the grand piano. As the hired accompanist seated himself, she laid her bouquet of American Beauties on its ebony top. They made a wonderful frontispiece. Behind, in radiant blonde beauty, was the painting of her mother on the wall!

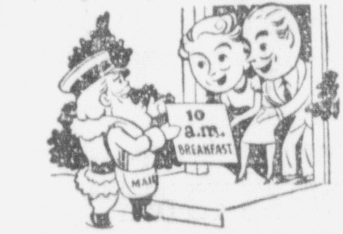

Gaby, at the last minute, had ordered that the piano be moved into just that position. "To remind me!" Jean told herself, and her heart twisted at the situation she had been put in.

HOLIDAY BREAKFAST

Have you a visitor you want to entertain informally? Or children home for a holiday vacation? Since it's hard to find dinner or lunch dates at this sociable season when some of your crowd are not previously engaged, why not entertain with a Christmas breakfast some morning about ten or eleven o'clock?

This delightful custom of inviting friends in for breakfast was popular in England during the nineteenth century. All who were asked to a breakfast party were highly flattered by the invitation, for it indicated the hostess wanted very much to have the pleasure of their company.

Breakfast at Ten or Eleven
Tomato Juice
Rice Flakes with Cream
Scrambled Eggs
Mince Meat Scones Jelly Muffins
Coffee
Fruit Platter

Be generous with the tomato juice—having an extra supply on the buffet table if your breakfast is self-service or keeping a generous pitcher at your hand during the sit-down meal. The coffee, too, should be continually on tap, as well as the scones and muffins. The secret of a successful breakfast party, as you know, lies not in the variety but in the plenteousness of each item on the menu.

This menu puts the emphasis on hot breads, and for a reason: It is that guests at a holiday breakfast have time and feel free to indulge their weakness for this favorite food. So we are suggesting two hot breads that are particularly outstanding for flavor and suited to the festive season, while scrambled eggs—always a favorite but too delicate to steal the show—is the main dish.

The mince meat scones lend a spicy holiday fragrance to the morning air. After you have made them, you will decide to keep a jar or can of mince meat on hand to use in coffee cakes, biscuits and muffins as well as for wonderful pies and other desserts.

There is the element of surprise and the gray note of color of the jelly muffins to recommend them for special party serving. And both of these hot breads are most convenient to prepare on such an occasion. Blend the dry ingredients of both batters the night before—then mix the muffins first and have them baking while you quickly shape the scones.

Mince Meat Scones
Sift together three times—
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt.

Work in thoroughly—

4 tablespoons fat.

Beat—

2 eggs,

first, reserving a small portion of the unbeaten egg white for brushing over tops of scones.

Add beat- eggs to flour mixture with—

3/4 cup top milk or cream.

Mix only enough to blend ingredients, then knead 30 seconds on slightly floured board. Roll to 1/4 inch in thickness and cut into diamond shapes.

Spread half of diamonds with—

1 teaspoon mince meat

then top with remaining ones. Brush the unbeaten egg white over tops, then sprinkle with sugar. Place on a lightly greased cookie sheet and bake in a hot oven (425° F.) 15 minutes. Serve hot.

Jelly Muffins

Sift together—

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour

4 teaspoons baking powder

1 teaspoon salt

2 teaspoons sugar.

Combine—

1 cup milk

1 egg, well beaten

4 tablespoons butter, melted.

Make a depression in center of dry ingredients, then pour in liquid mixture all at once, mixing only enough to dampen flour. Fill greased muffin pans about two-thirds full.

Sprinkle—

Grated American cheese

over top of each, then in center lightly place

1 teaspoon currant jelly.

Bake in a hot oven (400° F.) 25 minutes.

Large Fruit Platter

This is a final extra touch that sends your guests off even more enthusiastic about your breakfast party. Bring the platter in with dessert plates and see that each person gets a portion of each fruit. The assortment of fruits might be as follows: 2 or 3 bananas, cut lengthwise, 1 red apple, cut in thin wedges, 1 cup canned Bing cherries drained, 4 to 6 semi-circles of canned pineapple, 1 large orange, sliced, and 1 grapefruit, sectioned

BENSALEM OPENS ITS CAGE SEASON; LOSES THE OPENER

Lower Moreland Five Victors Over Cornwells Heights Lads By Score of 52 to 22

SCHULTZ GETS 8 GOALS

Bensalem Was Away Off Its Usual Form in The Contest

By Jack Gill
CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 18.—Bensalem inauspiciously pried the lid off of its 1946 basketball season last night by dropping a top heavy verdict to a rangy Lower Moreland five, 52 to 22.

Striking furiously from the field and the free throw lane, the lads of Coach Skeets Anglemeyer atoned for the defeat Bensalem administered to them in football during the fall. Possessing a noticeable height advantage that clearly enabled the Blue and Gold to exercise complete backboard control, the winners piled up a wide 10 to 1 first period margin and led at halftime by a 22 to 13 count.

A well built rangy lad, Dutch Schultz, had an eye for the basket, sinking eight shots from the field and one on a penalty heave. Several times he stood far off and dropped swishers that never touched the rim through for twin pointers. Wilkinson and Ridgeway also had an enjoyable evening.

Bensalem was away off of its usual form in its opening contest. Their passes went wild at times and rebounded off the close brick wall on the side. They missed several lay-up shots and were clearly outclassed.

In the preliminary fuss, the Bensalem Junior Varsity squad registered a close verdict over the Morelanders, 24-23, in a fray featured by a last ditch flareup.

MILDRED BURKE TO RETURN TO ARENA

TRENTON, Dec. 18.—Mildred Burke, the queen of the feminine grapplers, is slated for a return to the Trenton Arena wrestling wars tonight and one of the largest crowds in local mat history is expected to watch her perform. Her opponent will be Carol Starr, blond Arizona husky, who earned the right to tangle with Mildred by disposing of Hazel Forbes several weeks ago at the arena.

Mildred has appeared here twice this season. She pinned Hazel and Gladys Gillen in two wrestling displays of pyrotechnics that had the fans applauding her every move. She is the most popular wrestler ever to appear here and drew the biggest gates of the year. Mildred is returning from the Pacific Coast where she wrestled in every mat center and was a top-notch box-office draw. Against Miss Starr, Mildred will have to be at her best. Carol displayed plenty of speed and power in downing Hazel Forbes, one of the best.

The same quarrelsome quartet that thrilled the fans last Wednesday will do an encore in the team free-for-all tonight. Carl Grey and Paul Boesch put an end to the five-bout winning streak of Eddie Newman and Herbie Freeman. The bout was the most torrid ever contested here and many fans stopped at the office and asked Promoter Johnny Ipp to re-match the pairs.

Chris Zaharias, Greek beef farmer from Colorado, will tangle with a French-Canadian newcomer in a one-fall, 30-minute time limit brawl, and two bearded grapplers, Tiger Tasker, of Alaska, and Lem Hart, of Maine, will tug in the opening fray.

The first bout will start at nine p. m., one-half hour later than usual.

WARNING TO PIPE SMOKERS

DETROIT.—(INS)—Pipe smokers who hold their briars or corn cobs in the same place all the time need special filing to prevent tooth decay, according to Dr. L. A. Cadarette, Dean of the University of Detroit School of Dentistry.

BARTON'S ALL-STARS WIN FIRST-HALF HONORS

With the thunder of crashing mallets, and numerous high scores, the final matches of the first half were rolled by the Bristol Major Bowling League.

Barton's All-Stars nosed out two high-rolling quintets, Rohm & Haas and Burlington, to win the half by a two-game margin.

The evening was brilliant in that many high scores were rolled, a 268 by Manager O'Boyle, a 254 by Otto Brown, a 247 by Art Phipps, and a 245 by Sid Pursell. In all, 15 200 games were recorded.

Final standings of the Bristol Major League are as follows:

CHEMICAL WORKERS TO MEET SOAP-MAKERS

The Rohm & Haas basketball five will meet the biggest obstacle in its path to the first half championship of the Bristol Basketball League tonight on the Italian Mutual Aid floor when it stocks up against the fast-going Manhattan Soap five.

The chemical workers are undefeated in the four games played while Manhattan lost its opening tilt and has won three straight since then. However, the margins of victory by the Manhattaners have been far greater than those shared by the Maple Beach aggregation.

A victory for the Rohm & Haas team will practically clinch the first half as remaining on its schedule is Fifth Ward and Volt Texaco. Fifth Ward is in the midst of a losing streak while the Volt team has won but one game all season.

Remaining on the Manhattan schedule is the well-fortified Knights of Columbus five with its additional contingent from Morrisville, and the Fifth Ward club.

Manager Jimmy Dugan, of the soap-makers, strengthened his team during the past week-end by the signing of John Byers, former high-scoring ace of the Morrisville League, who played with the championship Simpson team of several seasons ago. Byers is expected to add plenty of scoring power to the Manhattan team.

Byers may get a starting post in tonight's lineup and will be used as a forward with Punkie Zeffries. Snyder will jump center, with the guard positions being taken care of by Mulligan and Hufnall.

Manager Johnny Cole will stick to his regular lineup of Cahill, Roe, Everett, Smith and Vanzant.

In the first game of the night, Volt, Della's Auto Boys quintet will attempt to move into a deadlock for third and possibly second place when it meets the "Proty" five.

Della's boys are now deadlocked for fourth place and a win tonight will move him up the ladder.

In its last start, Profy's bowed to the Rohm & Haas team for its first defeat of the season while the Auto Boys snatched a surprise victory over Fifth Ward.

The Profymen are still weak from the lack of substitutes, although Carnvale is expected to be in uniform tonight to fill in as a reserve with Chuck Klein. The Profy starting lineup will have Hughes, Slaven, Dorsey, Sak, and Buck Profy.

Manager Della is now claiming his Auto Boys as the "dark horse" team of the circuit. The addition of Vince Profy aided the team immensely and now Della feels that his aggregation will match with the best of the loop.

Tonight, his boys will have a chance to prove this as the radiomen are considered one of the strongest teams of the league.

The Auto Boys starting five will contain: Joe Dugan, Vince Profy, Joe Wooley, Lloyd McGinley, and Kyren Kervick.

Opening tap-off takes place at eight o'clock.

this evening at 7.30 in the church. The Christmas play, which is being directed by the committee headed by Miss Ida Hampton, centers about a group of young people who are holding a house party, Christmas Eve, at the home of one of the girls, and who decide to play a trick on Santa. But instead, Santa reverses the trick and throws a spell over the watcher. Finally, Santa lifts the spell and all have a Merry Christmas.
